

Sinclair Broadcasting's intention to force its stations to air the anti-John Kerry program, "Stolen Honor", represents an egregious abuse of its stewardship of the public interest. This is a blatantly partisan attempt to influence the outcome of the presidential election. Sinclair Broadcasting is able to use the public airwaves at no cost to them, and as such, has an inherent duty to serve the public interest. Pushing programming like "Stolen Honor" is an obvious abuse of that trust, and a clear example of media consolidation at its worst. I urge the FCC to prevent Sinclair from airing "Stolen Honor", or at least mandate that Sinclair afford equal time for pro-John Kerry content such as "Going Upriver".

Sincerely,
